Balaton Spa adds face mask to organic skincare range

30 Oct 2007

By Richard Winter

Balaton Spa has added a face mask to its collection of skincare products, which it claims will give users a mini facelift. Balaton also claims that the mask, which is made of entirely natural and organic ingredients, will give “fabulous results” for all skin types, even on the first application.

Like all Balaton products, the face mask is made from the 100-percent-natural moorland peat and water found in Lake Balaton in Hungary. The ingredients are completely organic, eliminating any synthetic smells, mess or chemicals.

The face mask, which only needs to be applied for three minutes, is described as providing the benefits needed by skin in winter. Balaton said the mask helps prevent signs of premature ageing, reduces the appearance of fine lines and small wrinkles, deeply hydrates and moisturises skin.

The face mask has grabbed the attention of several celebrity style gurus including TV personalities Trinny Woodall and Susannah Constantine, who have labelled the product as “the only one to use”. Newsreader Sophie Raworth has also given the face mask the thumbs up.

One 100ml jar of the face mask, which contains enough product for 16 uses, has a recommended retail price of £19.95. Harrods, Hoopers and Selfridges are already stocking the product.

Balaton Spa first introduced its unique organic blend of products into the UK in 1967, styling its face and skincare products on the European spa culture.
